10th June 2018 10th Sunday of the Year With the Lord there is mercy and fullness of redemption

Psalm 129 opens with a voice that rises from the depths of sin and evil. The person who is praying addresses in the first person. I cry to you O Lord expresses in a simple and sincere language deep and tender feelings.

The Psalmist shows a knowledge of the misery that sin has caused and the certainty of God's judgement. At the same time a longing for God's mercy. He is confident that God will reach out to him even in the abyss of darkness. Remembering only those who fear God receive his pardon.

This psalm is usually recited for the faithful departed. A note of confidence that there is grace and forgiveness for the whole people. The abundant experience of redemption is realized continually and gives hope to an expectation of full salvation.
